

This is an outrage. The "Do Not Call" Lists are intended to protect individuals as well as businesses from wasting valuable time and energy dealing with telephone solicitors when the time and energy would be better spent in helping our businesses grow and prosper in our declining economic times as well as to keep the annoyance of inconveniencing private citizens enjoying their day, receptionists and secretaries with heavy workloads, and small business owners who are trying to keep costs down and profits up. There is also a protection factor here. No one wants just anyone to have their personal and/or business numbers. I am sure members of the FCC wouldn't care to have their personal home numbers available to any and all that want them. If the FCC is going to overturn this law, then people and businesses are going to start calling YOU, DAY AND NIGHT. Think about it, this law protects you, too!
